PAYMENT EXPECTATIONS FOR PARD THERAPEUTIC RIDING LESSONS

All riders are expected to pay a $100 fees deposit at the beginning of the season. The cost is $20 per lesson and and we anticipate, weather permitting, that we will have a minimum of 10 lessons per season. Riders will be billed for the remainder of the fees at the end of riding season.

Riders are expected to pay for lessons they miss during the season, however if the lesson is cancelled by the Instructor the rider is not expected to pay.

The cost of lessons is based upon a fair compromise between what continuing education for Instructors costs and what PARD Therapeutic Riding a can contribute to offset the difference.

Riding fees do not cover the cost of the care of program horses. PARD relies on donations from private individuals, service groups and fundraising campaigns to keep our costs as low as possible.
